

ABSTRACT

A method of communicating between a handheld computer and other local area computing devices having wireless communication capability includes providing a handheld computer and identifying a 5 plurality of other local area computing devices having wireless communication capability. The method further includes creating an identifier for one or more of the plurality of other local area computing devices and listing each identifier on a display. The list is sorted in order of at least one of distance and direction from the handheld computer.